“ Dear friends and family of Kevin Stueve, in 2015, Kevin was working on the translation of my book "Love and Logic of the Soul" from German to English. I very much enjoyed the collaboration between us. We were sending text back and forth, discussing various possibilities of translation and also having a good deal of fun. A few weeks ago, I started reading through Kevins English version of my book again. I liked it - again - so much, that I spontaneously sent him a message through Skype:

Hi Kevin,
this will probably come as a surprise to you to hear from me. I am currently reading through the English version of my second book again, as I plan to create a Kindle version for download. And I just wanted to let you know that after 5 years time I still like your translation very much. In many instances, you caught the spirit and tone I intended this to have.
So: thank you once more.
I do hope this finds you in good spirits and health, with the times being strange and hard enough. Bye Artho

When I received no answer, I had the impulse to look for Kevin in the internet and finally came upon this page. I am very sad to learn about Kevins demise! I remember him as a very competent and simultaneously sweet person - a rare combination. Me and my wife will hold im in loving memory. May he rest in peace. Love, Artho

“ On Thursday I read the sad news about you, Kevin. Im so sorry that this happened but I hope that you can find rest and peace now. I will miss you and will always remember the good moments when you were with us. You were a good and kind person with a sense of humor and Im so sad that you are gone. My compassion goes also to the family. Im sorry for your loss.

“ Just saw that you passed Kevin. You were my best friend in Junior High. So glad I got to see you and that my son and wife got to meet you a few years ago. I will remember how intelligent and funny you were. You followed your conscience Kevin. You were a good man and I wish I would have talked to you more often.
