“ A very long time ago, Mildred baby sat for my oldest son, Nathan, when I unexpectedly went back to teaching in the winter of 1966. I had never had a baby sitter before, and Mildred was perfect! Nathan liked the toys at her house better than his own, and all Mildred's young children provided him with a ready-made bunch of siblings. He loved it! My only regret was that he was so excited to go to Mildred's house that he forgot about me! I learned to get over it, and to place my hurt feelings with gratitude for Mildred's gentle ways with children.

I hope the family finds comfort in remembering their own special times with this gentle woman.
