“ It is so hard to believe your gone! I have so many memories of you, from childhood to adulthood. The memories from Church at Brushy, the Easter breakfast's there ...with you helping fix breakfasts and your cooking skills. You cracking eggs with one hand. The meals my sister and I fixed in hall for after church...and how you loved beans and ham and fried taters and cornbread. How you was always there and always there to help out and keep that church going. You were it's lifeline, and now your gone. The fun we had at your shop, when you had us come clean. You really just wanted us there to chit chat and hang out. It was a shockingly hard day hearing you were gone. □ But really ..you are not gone...you are in your eternal home now, walking on streets oh Gold! I can just picture you there. I'm sure you and dad are chatting awsy, and dad is calling you Dutch. I will see you again my friend.

“ For the past 5 years that I have been with the Cbarn family you have come in everyday to sit and drink your cup of water and eat your little Debbie snack cakes, you would fill our cups and ask is this too many with that mischievous grin of yours. 5 years of greeting me with a good morning sweetie and a see ya later as you walked across the parking lot to head off to work. I never did ask you why you parked so far away from the store.. maybe you needed the exercise.... Our talks about business or about your lovely wife and taking her flowers to the cemetery... Wayne, I am beyond heartbroken that I will not see you or hear your little giggle or to see you pretending to be “scared and jump” when I was a little too much that morning.. I knew something wasn’t right when you didn’t come in yesterday morning... I called the shop yesterday to make sure that you were ok and I was hoping that you were just running behind when you didn’t show up... no answer... I was fixin to call this morning when I think that it was your sister or someone close to you called me with the devastating news that you had left this world to go home to be with your wife. My heart hurts, mornings will never be the same without you. I cannot wrap my head around the fact that you will not be here to greet me in the mornings anymore. The table seems so empty now... I can’t help but feel so overwhelmed with sadness when I look over at “your table” knowing that you will never sit there again.... We will never hear you complain that the prices of your snack cakes were waaayyyy too much.... We will never hear oh... I don’t have any cash are you going to pay for my breakfast today.. words cannot express how big of a hole that will be here everyday for forever. This will always and forever be your seat. Rest easy my friend. You will never be forgotten..
